ABSTRACT

A managed node includes a first database having metadata descriptive of data stored in a second database. A first process is in communication with that second database. A second process, in local communication with the first process through an interface for interprocess communication, provides communication over a network through a selected protocol. This second process accesses the first database to translate communications between the selected protocol and the selected interface.

20213285.DOC